Faithful Chronicles By Father Frank D. Almada

Somehow I missed it. Back on September 30th Pope Francis issued a decree that henceforth the Third Sunday in Ordinary Time is to be a time of reading, studying, celebrating and sharing the Word of God. I only learned about this new celebration about ten days ago. Today is the Third Sunday of Ordinary Time. Let me offer some thoughts about this new addition to the Roman Missal's calendar.

I think this is a great idea. The Word of God, the Sacred Scriptures, are essential to our faith lives. It is no coincidence that Pope Francis issued his decree on the feast day of St. Jerome, who was a fourth century biblical scholar, who translated the books of the bible from Hebrew and Greek into Latin, in a translation which would nourish European Christians for almost 1,500 years. It was also St. Jerome who wrote, "Ignorance of Scripture is ignorance of Christ."

It was only in 1943 that Pope Pius XII allowed Catholic scholars to study the bible in their original languages, and to work "across the aisle" so to speak with their colleagues in Protestant seminaries and Jewish schools. Scholars learned to distinguish in the bible between those ideas and concepts which are essential to the faith, and "extraneous information," such as geography, names and dates. It is also necessary to understand and identify the particular genre of the 72 books of the bible (gospel, letter, poetry, history, prophetic reflections, legend/myth, etc.).

Studying the bible was core to my seminary studies. My classmates and I were blessed with excellent teachers of the bible, and a wealth of authors available through journals and books. Further, we were the first generation of priests to learn how to preach from the expanded lectionary. Before 1970, the same readings from the bible were used year after year. With the lectionary of 1970, there is a three-year cycle of Sunday readings (with each year focused on a particular evangelist; in 2020 we'll listen to Matthew's gospel) and a two-year cycle of weekday readings. If you were to attend Mass daily for three years you would hear over 90% of the bible.

But the bible is certainly not just for seminarians or priests. The Fathers of the Second Vatican Council explicitly wanted all the faithful to read, study and pray the bible. No longer would reading the bible be "a Protestant idea." That old canard that "Catholics don't read the bible" was wrong. Every Mass said for 2,000 years has had at least two, and sometimes three or four readings from the Sacred Scriptures. Harkening back to the first centuries of the church, the books of the bible, and in particular the Gospels and the letters of St. Paul, were for everyone. It's a rare parish today which does not have at least one bible study for parishioners, led by priests, deacons, religious women and men, and laity.

Again, it is no coincidence Pope Francis set this "Word of God Sunday" near the annual Week of Christian Unity (January 18-25) and Day of Dialogue between Jews and Catholics (January 17). This shows the solidarity among all believers in the one living God, who are nourished by the Hebrew Scriptures (Old Testament), and all Christians, who are fed by the New Testament and its proclamation of Our Savior Jesus Christ.

In the spirit of the pope's instruction, let me offer some suggestions for putting "Word of God Sunday" into action. First, purchase a good, up-to-date translation of the bible and have it available in your home. Among the best translations are the New American—Revised Edition, New Jerusalem, New Revised Standard Version, Contemporary English Version and Good News Translation (both from the American Bible Society). Second, come to Sunday Mass ten or 15 minutes ahead of time, to read the readings for that Mass, and see what words or phrases strike a chord within you. Third, try to pray the bible daily. It doesn't have to be a long passage, three or four verses, or one story or parable, are enough to ponder. (Since we are in the year of Matthew, his gospel might be a good place to start.) The Liturgy of the Hours (morning prayer and evening prayer) has short biblical passages too, as well as the beauty and challenge of the psalms.

Fourth, consider joining a bible study. Here you will have an experienced guide available to answer questions, guide your group, and help all of you to listen to the many and varied ways the same biblical passage can touch people. Fifth, pray to the Holy Spirit that the Word of God may find a home in your mind, heart and soul.

Happy Word of God Sunday!

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION NEWS

Our four RCIA candidates are back for the second half of their study and preparation to become full members of the Catholic Church this Spring at the Easter Vigil. They are now entering the period of the Catechumenate (a period of study and learning about the faith). A catechumen is a person who is studying and learning about their faith. These upcoming months are critical to their religious development and will lay a strong faith-formation for their lifetime. Thank you for keeping them in your continued prayers.

PRE-CANA: Did you recently get engaged over the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays? If so, congratulations from your Church family! A critical aspect of having a Catholic wedding in a Church is for our engaged couples to attend a Marriage Preparation Seminar in the year they are looking to be married. For our parishes, we call our session Pre-Cana. Our Pre-Cana sessions are led by our clergy team and married couples within our parish who will intelligently speak about important topics such as: A Sacramental Marriage, Finance, Parenting and Communication. We will offer our Pre-Cana

Marriage Preparation classes for our couples looking to be married in the Church this upcoming Spring. Please continue to read the bulletin for a date and time for our session. Again, wishing our newly engaged couples best wishes! May God Bless you both and your marriage!

The DEEP group with Fr. Mohler will continue to meet on Mondays twice a month at 6 PM in the St. Maurice chapel as we strive to grow deeper in our faith through Discipleship, Evangelization, Eucharist and Prayer. Our upcoming meetings will include watching videos and having a discussion from the series "Restored: Stories of Encounter" about ordinary people whose lives have been radically moved by Jesus Christ to serve others in bringing Christ's light to dark and lonely places. Upcoming meeting dates: Jan. 27, Feb. 10 & Feb. 24. Questions or comments can be directed to Fr. Mohler at frmohler@outlook.com or 412-271-5666.
